INTRODUCTION

Shaker Museum | Mount Lebanon stewards the most comprehensive collection of Shaker material culture and archives, and the founding site of Shakerism. It is positioned to be the leader nationwide among organizations devoted to Shaker history and a driving force for positive change and growth in Columbia County.

There has never been a better time to illuminate and perpetuate the legacy of the Shakers in America. The Shakers offer models for inclusion, conviction, sustainability, innovation, entrepreneurship, equality, and community. In a time of increasing divisions along racial, economic, and political lines, the Shaker legacy offers a roadmap for how to create sustainable, meaningful lives within strong communities.

HISTORY OF THE ORGANIZATION

The Shaker Museum was founded in 1950 by John S. Williams, Sr. on his farm in Old Chatham, New York. Beginning in the 1930s, Williams traveled extensively to then-active Shaker communities and purchased and was given fine examples of their arts, industries, and domestic life, as well as spiritual artifacts. His approach was that of a cultural anthropologist, documenting Shaker life as he found it while attempting to preserve their history.

The Shaker Museum acquired materials in the early 1960s from the Shakers’ Central Ministry, which included books, photographs, manuscripts, and correspondence—documents critical to telling the story of the Shakers and that support the Museum’s object holdings. In 1990 the Museum’s name was amended to Shaker Museum & Library.

In 2004 the Museum acquired the historic Shaker Village at Mount Lebanon and later changed its name to Shaker Museum | Mount Lebanon. Currently the Museum maintains two campuses. The original Old Chatham site houses the administrative staff, and storage for collections, library materials, and archives, and is open year-round by appointment. The Mount Lebanon site is open to the public seasonally and offers during this time guided tours of the site, access to exhibitions, and a shop.

VISION

The Shakers were guided by core values of conviction, integrity, inclusion, and innovation. They were early advocates of gender equality, welcomed African Americans, practiced pacifism, and put community needs above individual ones. They were successful entrepreneurs known for their various manufacturing enterprises.

The Shakers’ core values are the foundation of Shaker Museum | Mount Lebanon’s cultural and ethical vision, and inspire decisions about programming, resource allocation, and community outreach. The museum seeks to tell the complete story of the Shakers, including their material culture as seen through furniture, costume, archives, photographs, etc.; their social legacy of communalism, inclusion, and peace; and their technological innovations in manufacturing, architecture, land management, farming, and engineering.

As the Shakers did, Shaker Museum | Mount Lebanon seeks to open its doors to all, and to explore the full spectrum of the Shakers’ legacy, including design, aesthetics, religion, social justice, history, architecture, entrepreneurship, sustainability, and community building.
